Seven Special Officers of the Illinois Central Were Rescued From Crowd of Strikers Near St. Louis—San Francisco Policeman Is Reported Missing.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Oct. 9.—Seven special officers of the Illinois Central railroad were rescued from double their number of strikers at Valley Tower, four miles south of the city limits, late Saturday by reinforcements on a special train from this city.

The special officers refrained from employing their weapons in repulsing the men who attacked them.

The special officers were patrolling the company's yards, when the strikers surrounded them and began throwing stones. Rather than open fire on their tormentors, the men attacked retired to a frame building and barricaded the doors. Every window in the place was broken by the stones.

The strikers fled upon the approach of the rescue party.

Efforts are being made to learn the identity of the strikers with a view to causing their arrest for violating the federal injunction issued at Cairo.

CORSON CLARKE AT NEVADA THEATRE TOMORROW NIGHT

Is it not strange that so many of our foremost actors and actresses, in their time of playing many parts, have begun their careers by being cast for old roles? Harry Corson Clarke, who will be seen at the Nevada theater on Tuesday evening, in his new farce, "His Absent Boy," is one of these.

"Few of our theater-goers," writes a San Francisco critic, have thought of Mr. Clarke as a young man since he made his advent here in old-man characters, so completely does he identify himself with the role he assumes. To see him in any role is to have that become the idea of the man himself. On one or two occasions, when Mr. Clarke assayed a youthful role, the surprise of the audience to find that their favorite "old man" comedian was good looking, youthful in appearance, and spry, instead of decrepit, was something noteworthy. Clarke's humor may be characterized as dry, droll, crackling. He has eyes that flash fire as well as mirth. He is agile, nimble, graceful and quite suggestive of the society man."

Harry Corson Clarke, the comedian, who is declared by many to be the natural successor to Nat Goodwin, and whose popularity is increasing year by year, as he is seen in new creations, in none of which he ever fails to score, has a new farce this season which he declares gives him the best opportunity he has ever had. It is called "His Absent Boy," and in it Mr. Clarke appears in the part of the mendacious Mr. Pennie; a friend to be helped—an imaginary son to be supported, for whom Pennie draws an allowance from his wife—form the basis of one of the funniest laughter producers of recent days. The support with which Mr. Clarke has surrounded himself is entirely adequate, and when the company is seen here on Tuesday evening of this week it is no exaggeration to say that "laughter holding both its sides" will be the aptest description of the large audience that is sure to greet him.
